

REVIEW OF THE FILM

BULLET TRAIN

Bullet Train is a 2022 American action comedy directed by David Leitch. The film is based on the 2010 novel Maria Beetle. It stars Brad Pitt, Joey King, Aaron Taylor-Johnson, Brian Tyree Henry, Andrew Koji, Hiroyuki Sanada, Michael Shannon, Benito A. Martinez Ocasio and Sandra Bullock. This film won awards for Art Directors Guild, Critics Choice Super, MTV Movie and TV Awards.

In the film, Ladybug, a former hitman, must fight against other assassins while traveling on a bullet train. In Tokyo, Yuichi Kimura seeks revenge after an unknown assailant pushes his son off a rooftop. Ladybug is assigned to retrieve a briefcase from a bullet train bound for Kyoto. On the train he meets Yuichi, two assassin brothers named "Lemon" and "Tangerine" and the son of a Russian Yakuza boss known as the "White Death." When Ladybug retrieves the briefcase, he is attacked by "Wolf", a murderer seeking revenge for the death of his wife at their wedding.

This film contains a mixture of genres, such as action, adventure, comedy and thriller. The soundtrack generates intrigue and desire to know what comes in the next scene. The plot of the film is very well thought and is very original. The fact that appear world-known despiant is an aspect that generates more audiences and usually attracts more attention.

Bullet train is a film that I liked so much because, apart from the fact that appear very famous movie characters, the action movies that contain comedy at the same time, for me, are the best films that can exist. If you like the mixture of film genres or you just like Brad Pitt, I definitely recommend you this movie.

Although, if you do not like blood and murders, you will have a hard time watching this movie and you will not like it.
